Postmodern music is a specific genre that developed during the late 1960s largely as a product of the large-scale social changes at that time. This type of music is characterized by its adherence to the same ideas and points of view found in other areas of postmodernism. The postmodern philosophy and art movement embraces the absence of one defining structure or ideology.

Modern Music Composition: Introduction - YouTube

In modern societies, cultural change seems ceaseless. The use of fashion is especially obvious for popular music. While much has been written about the origin and evolution of pop, most claims about its history are anecdotal rather than scientific in nature. To rectify this we investigate the US Billboard Hot 100 between 1960 and 2010. Using Music
