Childless Worker With Income at Poverty Line Owes $1,000 in Federal Taxes. The standard deduction, EITC, and Child Tax Credit (CTC) are set at levels that ensure that families with children don't have net federal tax liability if they earn poverty-level wages. As a result, no families with children are taxed into poverty. Single childless adults, in contrast, begin owing income tax when their earnings are still below the poverty line, and they receive little or no EITC.
