A book entitled "Flight of the Buffalo" (Belasco & Stayer, 1993) described two differing types of team leadership. In the traditional leadership model there is one leader who is responsible for planning, organising, commanding, coordinating, and controlling the team. S/he is to be the "head buffalo", leading the team "herd" towards success.

Flight of the Buffalo by authors James A. Belasco and Ralph C. Stayer presents some unusual metaphors for leading others. In spite of this, or perhaps because of it, the information presented in this book is hard to ignore. The buffalo in the title refers to companies, which the authors see as many buffalo grazing at random.
