Globalization is not a new phenomenon, nor is it irreversible. In Globalization and History, Kevin O'Rourke and Jeffrey Williamson present a coherent picture of trade, migration, and international capital flows in the Atlantic economy in the century prior to 1914--the first great globalization boom, which anticipated the experience of the last fifty years.

History of Globalization

The historical origins of globalization are the subject of ongoing debate. Though many scholars situate the origins of globalization in the modern era, others regard it as a phenomenon with a long history. Some authors have argued that stretching the beginning of globalization far back in time renders the concept wholly inoperative and useless for political analysis.

Globalization And History The Evolution

In 1492 the process of globalization began when Christopher Columbus unintentionally “discovered” the “new world”. The cultures of the Nahua, Inca, Maya, and Spanish peoples during the contact and conquest periods (1400s-1600s) was one of the factor that led to globalization. The different cultural, economic, social, philosophical, and political systems of these peoples, both before and after conquest cast an shadow of these cultures, though conquered, shape the Spanish-American ...
