Patrick Modiano - Facts - NobelPrize.org

This short novel from the 2014 Nobel Prize laureate covers familiar themes of evanescent recollection and impossible forgetting. Encre sympathique, or invisible ink, functions as a metaphor for Modiano's deceptively simple style, for his skill at making tersely drawn characters and apparently tangled plotlines hauntingly memorable and evocative.

Patrick Modiano (Author of Dans le café de la jeunesse perdue)

It is a half-joking commonplace, promulgated by the author himself, that Patrick

Modiano writes the same book over and over. More pertinent is a remark he made in the preface to an omnibus of his novels, in which he noted that his books taken together “form a single work . . . often the same faces, the same names, the same places, the same sentences recur from one to the other.”
